Four Greek Songs
II.
Apple trees and the aroma of incense sifting, wafting 'round the altars.

There, too, babbling cool rushing water flowing under branches of apple trees.

And with roses the whole place now is shaded and from shimmering dark green leaves the sleep of enchantment flows through.

There, too, a meadow where in graze the horses where spring flowers blossom, spreading open and with breezes blowing so gently
there you, *Cypris, now into our cups of gold pouring gracefully nectar with our joyous feast

in - ter - twine.

* Cypris is a poetic name for Aphrodite
